

THE ARMY OF THE CUMBERLAND.

Section of General Garfield's Former Comrades in Arms.

At a meeting of the members of the Army of the Cumberland now in Washington, held at the Riggs House last evening, the following proceedings were had in reference to the death and the coming obsequies of their late comrade, General G. W. Balloch. On General G. W. Balloch was called to the chair and Captain J. J. Noah chosen secretary. The following comrades were present: General G. W. Balloch, Colonel G. C. Kniffin, General A. D. Mussey, Colonel F. A. Seely, Major W. J. Vance, General George A. Sheridan, Captain M. Barringer, Captain J. J. Nash, Captain A. P. Lacey, John Van Doren, C. J. Squires, Captain A. H. Hamilton, Captain W. H. Smith, Captain Frank Clineford, Illinois; John Tweedie, Colonel A. W. Webb, General E. A. Carmen, and Captain D. W. Houghson. Comrade R. D. Mussey then addressed the meeting, as follows:

COMRADES: Eighteen years ago last summer the Army of the Cumberland and his chief of staff made their dispositions for the second day of Chickamauga. Eighteen years ago to-night that chief of staff, who had lost his life in the battle, lay here. He had heard the innumerable bullets of an eager foe reckoned up by thousands of the dead, the wounded, the missing, of his army. Their own army had been beaten and the next day, the Army of the Cumberland moved back to Chattanooga—victorious or vanquished, we need read no history to know which. The Minutemen of the North took courage together that the Republic to-day should see no harm, but they met without their leader! To-night, not we only, but all the nation, the world, the nation and the world trace to one shot our wounded dead, and missing men. Tomorrow and Thursday we will meet again at Chattanooga, and there meet at Chattanooga their ancient foes now become their friends, and with fraternal grasp of the hand, raise the flag of a common country over the land of the South. That the South have raised it to the peak, but it shall stand high up, telling every eye that the sorrows which will follow the battle will be far greater than any since to lower it in humiliation, is a real as that of those who sought to keep it down. The South is not content, but the country comes together, even if never it did before. Could he but know it, ample recompence would be his for all those hopes cut down untimely. His spirit, however, is still with us, and for all those days of pain, all those nights of weariness, all those hours of suffering and consuming sorrow, the Nation's prayers and a Nation's love were poured out as the water, humanity stood watching with bated breath, and the world held its breath in suspense of an unpredictable joy, that his death has revealed, if indeed it had not largely caused the act which the country is as yet unable to avert. From this house, during the political trial of General Garfield's nomination was made; at this house his comrade, with whom he had been a member of the Senate, the honor that had come to him; at this house he stayed those last days of his life as a private citizen, and died. Let us hope that the high ideals of his decay are appropriate to his worth; now that we can no longer express to General Garfield our deep appreciation of his work, take steps to show others that he is still loved and honored; that we sympathize with his family.

At the conclusion of his remarks Comrade Mussey moved the appointment of a committee of three to take care of the funeral services. The committee, composed of members of the Comrades in Washington in the cheques of their late comrade, General James A. Garfield, and to express to his family their sincere condolences in the bereavement which they have suffered. The following committee was appointed: Colonel G. C. Kniffin, Colonel F. A. Seely, and Captain D. W. Houghson. The committee proceeded to receive general thanks, and received a general demand. Sherman advised that this society met in a body and view the remains. It was finally agreed that the comrades meet at such time and place as the committee may advise in the public prints. On motion of Colonel Kniffin,

Ordered, That a committee be appointed to send a letter expressing the sympathy of the Comrades at the meeting of the society at Chattanooga, to read the address of the society at Chattanooga.

General R. D. Mussey was appointed as that committee.

THE ROUTE TO WASHINGTON.

Who Will Accompany the Remaining Members of the Funeral Party will Start.

Special to THE REPUBLICAN.

LONG BRANCH, Sept. 20, 12 m.—The arrangements for the removal of the remains have been completed with the Pennsylvania and New Jersey Central Railroads for the transportation of the remains to Washington. The train will start from Elberon at ten o'clock to-morrow morning. It will be appropriately arranged and draped. The remains will be accompanied by the family physicians and attendants, members of the Cabinet and their families. In the arrangement, it is being specially desired to separate the widow of Mrs. Garfield, so as to lessen as much as possible the strain to which she is subjected. No stops will be made except at water stations and no ostentatious demonstrations are expected. The wish of Mrs. Garfield is to have the trip as free from display as possible.

The Army Preparations.

Special to THE REPUBLICAN.

LONG BRANCH, N. J., Sept. 20.—Captain Ingalls, U. S. A., in command of the guard of honor detached from Battery A, First Artillery, says that no formal military orders have yet been issued, and will not be probably, until the Secretary of War arrives, who will himself then take charge of the military features. As commanding officer of the guard, he has the words and ordered full uniform suitable for the duty, excepting nothing like a military pageant, here, no additional soldiers will come, and the only order of the Secretary of War will probably be to detail a personal guard to accompany the remains to Washington and Cleveland. General Grant has just arrived at the Elberon, in company with John Russell Young and others. He was received with a crowd. He conversed with Doctor Agnew on the porch of the Elberon for eight or ten minutes and then retired into the hotel.

President Arthur's Arrival.

LONG BRANCH, N. J., Sept. 20.—President Arthur reached Elberon at 105 by special train. He was accompanied by Secretaries Blaine and Lincoln. The other members of the Cabinet were at the station. The President, after a short conversation with the Cabinet, who paid him their respects in the car, came out on the platform leaving for Long Branch's arm. Both men looked and then the Executive party at once took cars and were rapidly driving to Mrs. Taylor's cottage, adjoining the Elberon. A few moments after they arrived Mrs. Blaine and Mrs. MacVeagh went across the lawn to the Franklin cottage to pay Mr. Garfield a visit of condolence. A large crowd witnessed the arrival of the President, but all recognized the peculiar horror of the situation, and perfect silence and decorum were maintained.

Final Arrangements Here.

Long Branch, N. J., Sept. 20.—Benedict, the undertaker in charge of the remains, has telegraphed to Speare, of Washington, to take charge of all arrangements necessary for the removal of the remains. Dr. W. H. Barnes, a Washington livery-stable keeper, who is here, has tendered anything that may be wanted in the way of carriages, &c., and leaves to-night for Washington to make the necessary preparations. W. S. Rose, who has been here for the past few days at the representative of the Christian Church, also leaves for Washington to-night. It appears to be fully understood that the service will be to be held at three p. m. on Friday will be conducted by the pastor of the late President's church.

The Northern and Southern Armies.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Sept. 20.—The following program has been adopted for the reunion of the Northern and Southern Armies at a joint meeting where ex-Postmaster-General and ex-Senator A. W. Johnson will preside. A procession will occur as previously announced; and it is expected that the standards will be draped, and the members will wear emblems of mourning. Requies services will succeed the greeting on Cameron Hill, and in the afternoon a grand review will be held. Rev. D. D. Bathman, late colonel in the confederate army, will conduct the requies services. The band has been abandoned, but the remainder of the original programme will be carried out. The gay decorations of the city are heavily draped.

The Expression of the Face.

Special to THE REPUBLICAN.

LONG BRANCH, N. J., Sept. 20.—Executive Clerk Warren L. Young, who watched by the Secretary of State's remains last night, says the expression of the face is the deepest, most natural and characteristic. It shows emanation in some degree, as would be inevitable after his long period of sickness and suffering, but the physicians say after the embalming the emaciation will be less evident. It is probable a plaster cast will be taken of his features.

Independence Hall.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 20.—The authorities have already awarded the contract for draping Independence Hall. The interior will also be draped, if possible, in the style of the President's remains, which will be state there. A tent is sent to Wayne MacVeagh, saying that it is the general desire of the citizens here that the remains should lie in state in Independence Hall, and the mayor will telegraph the Attorney-General to that effect.

General Grant's Visit at the Cottage.

LONG BRANCH, Sept. 20, 11:56 a. m.—General Grant and Colonel Fred Grant have just driven up, and are standing on porches of Elberon in earnest conversation with Dr. Agnew. Five or six feet taller than has been our accustomed sense of height, and the portico and reading room of both are sumptuous. J. T. B.
